

Mid-length Bio

Chrissie Angell is a native Kansan turned Army-wife and boy-mom whose passion is pouring into the hearts of women.

As an Army wife, Chrissie has been blessed to meet women from all ages, stages, and walks of life. Those experiences have taught her that we are all so very similar in our humanness. We want to be seen, to be supported, to be loved. We long to find fulfillment, to live out our calling, to feel like our life has purpose. She is passionate about equipping and empowering women to fulfill their God-given purposes as they learn to walk alongside Him.

Chrissie is a Bible teacher, speaker, and writer who has spent years serving women through both Army volunteer opportunities and women's ministry roles. Through all these experiences she has fallen in love with her call to serve to women.

She is the founder of Humble Faith Ministries and co-founder of Joy in Faithful Living. She has been a speaker and teacher at MOPS, PWOC, and women's ministry events across the nation. She is also a certified DISC and Spiritual Gifts Facilitator.

Chrissie is an ordinary, small-town girl who hates exercise but loves chocolate and potato chips. She is married to Brian, the sweet boy turned love-of-her-life from her high school French class. They have two energetic boys, Brock and Chase, who keep them on their toes and give her lots of grey hair!
